Estimado Doctor Grossman.

El Centro de Investigación y Restauración de Bienes Monumentales ha tenido conocimiento de su publicación titulada: Defining Boundaries and Targeting Excavation with Ground Penetrating Radar: The Case of Raritan Landing. También tenemos conocimiento de su importante exposición en la Conferencia sobre Rescate Arqueológico del Nuevo Mundo que se realizó en Quito-Ecuador del 11 al 15 de mayo organizada por la O.E.A. y UNESCO.

Después de haber estudiado las características de su método de investigación y la conveniencia de su uso en los sitios arqueológicos del Perú, consideramos que sería oportuno realizar algunas pruebas en nuestro país para determinar la factibilidad de su uso.

Como es de su conocimiento, la Costa Peruana^{LS} actualmente un gran desierto con pequeños oasis formado por ríos que bajan de la Cordillera Occidental de los Andes. La Sierra está formada por impresionantes cordilleras y la selva caracterizada por su vegetación tropical.

En cada región hay importantes evidencias de las Culturas Pre-Incaica e Incaica y también de la ocupación Colonial Temprana. En los últimos años estamos muy interesados en desarrollar investigaciones de Arqueología Colonial de los Siglos XVI y XVII y deseamos contar con las técnicas adecuadas para las investigaciones en la Costa.

Actualmente se están efectuando excavaciones en la Iglesia de San Francisco de Lima, Casas Coloniales y otros Templos, con el objeto de restaurarlos, y consideramos que las primeras pruebas podrían realizarse en San Francisco.

Le agradeceré informarnos acerca de las posibilidades que ofrecen para ser aplicados en el Perú los métodos que usted usa, y si podríamos contar con su cooperación antes del mes de diciembre del presente año.

El Instituto Nacional de Cultura puede prestarle todas las facilidades que estén a nuestro alcance para que - los equipos puedan ser internados temporalmente al país libres de pago de derechos por tratarse de una actividad cultural de especial importancia.

Atentamente,
